Samsara’s Story

Juan Carlos, Alex, and Mike opened Samsara Home six years ago on May 31st, 2014 after leaving the corporate world. Juan Carlos’ furniture refurbishing hobby was expanding quickly out of their home, and clients started asking “where is your store?” This was the beginning of their storefront.

When deciding on what to call their store, they discovered the Sanskrit ‘Samsara’, which means the continuation of things in life – in other words, the circle of life. So, with the old furniture Juan Carlos brought back to life, they knew Samsara was the perfect name and concept. After six years, the store has evolved to include new, old, and transformed items to give customers more interesting choices.

How did Samsara end up in Downtown Parkville?

This was a mere coincidence, after finding a rental ad and going to view the property, they immediately fell in love with the town. After months of transformation, they were finally happy that Samsara had the charm to match the beautiful Old Town District.

What does the Samsara Team like the most about owning a business in Downtown Parkville?

The number one thing they like is all the awesome, supportive people they have met and the new people that come through their double red doors! They also enjoy how the small town experience has proven how connected the community is – especially in these difficult times.

The Samsara Team would like to thank everyone for their continued in-person visits, online shopping, and social media “likes and loves”!
